

SILENT MUSICK

the printed register

Season I

2026-07-27 – 2026-10-24

DMCF Radio

Silent Musick is the written register of DMCF Radio. Its rule is absolute: every word is dictated by a measured feature of the aired sound, and no author intervenes. This volume sets down ninety consecutive days of the station—the record on air at half past fifteen, Athens, on each day from the epoch—as the machine read them.

Across the season the vocabulary ages by a fixed clock: a noun held in July has, by October, quietly given way to another. The verbs are the grammar of motion and do not age; the nouns are the cast, and the cast is what turns over.

The Book is therefore a function, not a composition. Given the same feed it regenerates, letter for letter; this printing is one instance of it. The season that follows is a different book.

Generated from `airable.json` (epoch 2026-07-27), the seasonal-drift clock at one step per month, over days 0–89, sampled at 15:30 Athens. The text derives deterministically from the recordings’ acoustics via the sound-to-text rule; the same primitives (`hash32`, `mulberry32`) that air the station compute this Book, so it is identical on every machine.
